

The Historie of

Moore-ditch?

Fals. Thou hast the most vnflattering smiles, and art indeede the most comparatiue rascaldest sweet yong Prince. But Hall, I prethe trouble me no more with vanity, I would to God thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought: an old Lord of the Counsell rated mee the other day in the streete about you sir; but I markt him not, and yet he talkt very wisely; but I regarded him not, and yet he talkt wisely, in the street too.

Prince. Thou didst well: for Wisedome cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.

Fals. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a Saint: thou hast done much harme vnto me Hal, God forgie thee for it: Before I knew thee Hall, I knew nothing, and now am I, If a man should speake truly, little better than one of the wicked: I must giue ouer this life; and I will giue it ouer: By the Lord and I doe not, I am a villaine: Ile be damned for neuer a Kings sonne in Christendome?

Prince. Where shall we take a purse to morrow, Iacke?

Fals. Zounds, where thou wilt lad, Ile make one: and I do not, call me villaine, and Bassell me.

Prince. I see a good amendment of life in thee; from praying, to Purse taking.

Fals. Why, Hall; tis my vocation Hall: tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Enter Poyntes.

Poyntes. Now shall we know if Gads hill haue set a match: O, if men were to bee saued by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent Villaine that euer cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prince. Good morrow Ned.

Poyntes. Good morrow sweete Hall. What sayes Monsieur Remorse? What sayes sir John Sacke and Sugar, Iacke? How agrees the Diuell and thee about thy soule, that thou soldst him on Good-friday last, for a cup of Madera and a cold Capons legge?

Prin. Sir John stands to his word, the Diuell shall haue his bargaine, for he was neuer a breaker of Proverbs: hee will giue the Diuell his due.

Poyntes.

Henry the Fourth.

Poyntes. Then art thou damn'd for keeping the diuell.

Prince. Else he had been damn'd for Cosening.

Poy. But my lads, my lads, to morrow morning clocke early at Gads hill, there are pilgrims going ry with rich offerings, and Traders riding to La purses. I haue vizards for you all; you haue helues: Gads-hill lies to night in Rocheſter, I haue per to morrow night in Eaſtcheape; we may do sleepe: if you will goe, I will stuffe your purses full if you wil not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fals. Heare ye Yedward, if I tarry at home and hang you for going.

Poy. You will chops.

Fals. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prince. Who, I rob? I a theefe? not I by my faith.

Fals. Ther's neither honesty, manhood, nor ship in thee, nor thou canst not of the blood royal dareſt not stand for ten ſhillings.

Prince. Well, then once in my daies Ile be a man.

Fals. Why, thats well said.

Prince. Well, come what will, Ile tarry at home.

Fals. By the Lord Ile be a traitor then, when thou art a King.

Prince. I care not.

Poin. Sir John, I prethee leaue the Prince & may lay him down such reasons for this aduerture, that

Fals. Wel, God giue thee the spirit of perswasion: cares of profiting, that what thou speakest may be heares may be beleued; that the Prince, may (for the sake) proue a false theef; for the poore abused want countenance: farewell, you shal find me in

Prin. Farewel the latter spring, farewell Alhollon.

Poy. Now my good sweet hony Lord, ride with row. I haue a least to execute, that I cannot make Falſtaffe, Haruey, Rofsill, and Gads-hill, shal rob thee we haue already way-laid; your selfe and I, will and when they haue the booty, if you and I do not cut this head from my shoulders.
